This is second call. On the first call brief was held on part of the learned counsel for the applicant seeking adjournment; however, the matter was kept aside and learned counsel was holding the brief was called upon to acquire instructions for proceedings of the matter, if so desired. Now learned counsel holding brief states that the complainant is willing to proceed with the case before the trial Court and if other arguments are required, the matter be adjourned to any other date. Apparently the applicant is the complainant in the matter. Comments already stand filed, according to which the applicant had first made an attempt before the learned District Judge for transfer and on failure have come up before this Court. Even on merits not much of the case is made out based upon the record however, as the counsel is not present despite holding of the brief and the demand of propriety requiring that comments may not be made in respect to the merits. The matter stands dismissed for non prosecution.
