4. This petition has been filed against her inlaws by the petitioner who has apprehension that after divorce her minors children may be removed from her custody. The apprehension appears to be genuine, however, this court has no jurisdiction to adjudicate on the dispute of custody of children. Since the children have been produced in court, therefore it is established that the children are in the custody of mother. The official respondents are hereby directed to ensure that the custody of children should not be removed from the petitioner under any circumstances and if any complaint is lodged by the petitioner with the police they should immediately take action. However, private respondents are free to approach the Guardian and Wards Court for custody of children in accordance with law. This petition was in fact filed by the petitioner because she has been recently divorced.

This petition is disposed of with above observation and copy of this order may be sent to SSP and SHO concerned and also to respondents so that they should not take the law in their own hands.
